

First Nations Chiefs of Police Association
Vice President (East)

Shawn Dulude
Akwasasne Mohawk Police Service

Born into a police family in Lachine, Quebec. Chief Dulude is the 7th member of his family to be part of a police force. Starting with his great grandfather and down to him. Shawn began his career in 1993 with the Dorion Police Department as a Patrolman; over time as the departments merged in to the Surete du Quebec this is where Shawn developed his skills as he moved up the ranks.

From 2004-2010 he went from Sergeant to Assistant Director at the Valleyfield detachment, then in 2010 he made the decision to move to Harve St Pierre as the Station Director where he worked with the Mingan and Natashquan First Nations.

After 15 years with the Surete du Quebec Shawn retired in 2017 and began a new chapter in his career as the Chief of Police with the Akwasasne Mohawk Police Service. Spring 2018, Shawn was voted in to the Quebec First Nation's Chiefs of Police Association as their secretary and most recently voted in as vice-president of the First Nation Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police for the eastern region of the country. The FNCPA is a national organization that represents stand-alone First Nation Police Services across Canada. Their roles are to build capacity in order to raise the standards of policing services offered to Native communities.

The mission of the Akwasasne Mohawk Police Service is to enhance peace, harmony, justice and cultural values throughout Akwasasne. To honor and respect all living things. To acquire the highest level of professionalism and accountability in serving the community members of Akwasasne and surrounding areas.
