The Police Discipline Process: The Basics and Beyond

A professional, advanced level seminar for Prosecutors, Adjudicators, Professional Standards Investigators and Supervisors.

This practical seminar will examine the police discipline process, and arm you with the insight, tools and confidence to perform effectively throughout all disciplinary stages.

Our skilled practitioners will discuss the history and development of the formal police discipline process, and review the law, including The Honourable Michael H. Tulloch's Report of the Independent Police Oversight Review, within a relaxed spacious learning environment. They will focus on your role and the effective disposition of your responsibilities as Prosecutors, Adjudicators, Investigators and Supervisors within each stage of the Part V Process.

The teaching faculty, from administrative boards or tribunals, the judiciary, the legal profession, and from academia, have been chosen for their expertise in administrative law as well as their experience in conducting Hearings, and in drafting and presenting Decisions and Dispositions in the Police Services Act context.

Participants will benefit from the experience of their instructors and their fellow Tribunal members.

Discussions will also deal with the impact of The Charter and the Judicial Review Charter applications to administrative proceedings; common grounds for judicial review, and the Laws of Evidence as applied by administrative tribunals that an Adjudicator/Prosecutor will face during the process, e.g., Case Law, multi-lawyers, Motions, non-suits, delay tactics, etc. We will also discuss stress related issues that face Adjudicators and Prosecutors that may prevent them from moving forward on their cases in a timely manner. Additionally, we will discuss what impact the 2017 Tullock Report will have on the discipline process.

As participants and observers, you will be part of this hands on demonstration to heighten your awareness and responsibility in the field of police discipline as it relates to adjudication and prosecution.

This multi-faceted seminar is also a key opportunity to meet fellow practitioners, and to become part of a network for information sharing and professional development within the field of police discipline in Canada.

Paul Ceysens' two day lectures will "highlight the relevant issues that executives need to know at the (balcony) level", and, "...provide executives with the opportunity to keep abreast of current developments in law on a broad range of topics".
